Run raises $3610

The Minden Terry Fox Run for cancer research drew about 80 participants and raised $3,610, with more pledges yet to come in.

"We really lucked out with the weather," said Debbie Hilkers, one of the organizers of the Minden event. "It was great. For a first time run it went very well. We had so much support from the entire community."

support from the entire community."

This year's Terry Fox Run actually wasn't the first one in Minden. Peter Hynard, who has participated from the start, recalls Minden having a run the first year runs in memory of Terry Fox were organized. It was a five-kilometer run that did a couple of laps around the village.

Debbie Hilkers, left, not only helped organize this year's Terry Fox Run, she was a participant as well. Peter Hynard, right, receives a certificate for being the first to complete the five kilometre distance, from organizer Barb Nangle, while MC Cub Coneybeare looks on.

County calls for reclassification of ambulance service

Haliburton County Council passed a resolution last week supporting Glamorgan Township's bid to change the status of ambulance services.

Currently, ambulance services are categorized as essential, which Glamorgan Reeve Bev MacDuff points out is the same designation given to liquor stores.

With the essential designation, the ambulance services are subject to Social Contract provisions in terms of mandatory days off.

The impact of those Social Contract cutbacks was illustrated on July 30 when a serious accident occurred at the corner of Highways 503 and 507 in Gooderham.

MacDuff said that the ambulance service in Haliburton was reduced by one person that day because of the Social Contract. An ambulance was called to assist from the Minden base and "it took approximately 45 minutes to one hour for that ambulance to arrive on the scene."

Glamorgan Township Council's resolution requests that ambulance services be reclassified to a "critical service" designation, and further, that services deemed as critical be exempt from the Social Contract.

Glamorgan officials also requested that the Liquor Control Board of Ontario be reclassified as a non-essential service since "statistics prove that the majority of emergency ambulance calls are alcohol related."

It was also suggested that the Ministry of Health re-evaluate the rationale of hiring 12 managerial personnel who are not ambulance response employees.

The resolution was endorsed by County Council. It was addressed to Victoria-Haliburton MPP Chris Hodgson with copies to four counties in the area, Durham Region, the City of Peterborough the Association of Municipalities of Ontario and Health Minister Ruth Grier.

Warden is fed up with 'county bashing'

Haliburton County Warden Jim McMahon is fed up with those who have been indulging in county bashing lately.

"I'm tired of criticism of the county by people who aren't aware of the facts," McMahon said at last Wednesday's County Council meeting.

To set the record straight regarding the county's record of accomplishments, he cited the installation of a new computer system and the hiring of a manager, with only a four per cent increase in taxes.

McMahon noted that a number of employees have been laid off, thereby saving the taxpayers of the county a considerable sum of money.

One roads department position, one union position and one management position have been eliminated. He also stated that a good working relationship has been established with the unions representing the county employees.

"The social services budget is on line for the first time," he said. "And the roads budget will come on line."

McMahon said that the county needs to provide some leadership.

"We're in a changing world," he said. "We don't want to be left behind."

7 handguns, 3 rifles discovered in car

A Kinmount area man has been charged with a series of offenses following the seizure of 10 firearms, including seven revolvers.

The charges were laid after 47 year old David Snow drove his car to the Minden office of the OPP on Highway 35 last Tuesday. Accompanied by 41 year old Barbara Snow and two minors, he visited the office to follow up on a series of complaints arising out of a neighbourhood dispute.

During the discussion with an officer, it was revealed that as a result of the dispute, Snow had armed himself. Police checked the vehicle in which the four were travelling and discovered seven hand guns and three rifles, all loaded. The search also uncovered three machetes, two small cross-bows, nine knives and 880 rounds of ammunition.

David Snow has been charged with possession of restricted weapons without a permit, unsafe storage of firearms and possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace. Barbara Snow and the two minors have also been charged with possession of restricted weapons and unsafe storage of firearms.

David Snow was arrested and held in custody pending a bail hearing, while the other three were released.

Never too young, or old to participate in Terry Fox run

Since then, Hynard has been running in the Haliburton event.

Hynard was the first to complete the course in this year's run and he received a certificate for his effort.

The Minden run had a few highlights besides the success of the event.

Kim Campbell didn't expect to be able to participate this year. She was a couple of weeks overdue with the birth of her fifth child. She spent the night before the run in the hospital in the first stages of labour. She was discharged from the hospital before 9 a.m. on the day of the run so she decided to participate along with husband Jerry, daughters Janelle, Kristen and Kelsei, son Judd and nephew Graham Neave. She walked the entire 10-kilometre course.

The Terry Fox Run has a special meaning for the Campbells. At age six, Judd has been undergoing treatments for leukemia for half his life. He recently had his last treatment and is showing no signs of the disease.

The walk didn't have the effect of inducing labour, as might be expected. (Editor's Note: Kim Campbell gave birth on Wednesday of last week...a girl, Taelor Grace.)

Another notable participant was Lillian Davidson, 79, a resident of Hyland Crest Senior Citizens' Home. She completed about two and a half kilometres with the aid of her walker.

The run also attracted a large number of students who completed the course running, walking and cycling.

There is a strong possibility that the run will be an annual event.

"We're looking for volunteers to help organize next year's run," she said.

Hilkers admits that an 8 a.m. start may have been a little too early for some and an adjustment may be made for next year's event.

Everybody seemed to like the course," Hilkers said. "A lot of kids participated and that's nice to see."

The organizers were grateful for the support of volunteers who assisted with registration and at refreshment stops along the route and with the OPP who provided traffic control.

Anyone interested in helping with the run should contact Hilkers or Stanhope resident Barb Nangle, who was another of the people who made the 1994 Terry Fox Run in Minden happen.

Opening ends years of disruption at ASES

by Andrew Milne

The ribbon cutting ceremony to officially open the new wing of Archie Stouffer Elementary School took place September 19.

For staff and students of the school, it's the symbolic end of an often trying odyssey. Delays, holding up completion of the $4.6 million renovations and addition, resulted in classes being held at a number of improvised locations early in the 1993-1994 school year, including church halls, the community hall, and others.

Said principal Peter Forgrave, "I have a lot of different feelings tonight: joy, relief that it's finished, satisfaction, pride, but most of all gratitude — gratitude for the countless ways — and I do mean countless — that we received help from this extended community."

"The parents of our children," continued Forgrave, "showed incredible understanding for the difficulties and the inconveniences that we were facing, and always, always showed tremendous support for whatever help we needed, whatever adjustments we needed."

"Think of the members of the united church and the members of... the Roman Catholic church who welcomed us into their church halls. Think of Brian Sisson at the arena... think of the staff at J.D. Hodgson Elementary School and the caretakers there... we think of Vince Connaughan from Stedmans, and Derek and Craig Box from Riverview Furniture, who made sure that we had trucks... Clayton Cameron and the roads crew... many, many days they revamped their construction schedule so that we could the buses in and out at the primary school."

"To all of the husbands, wives, partners of our teaching staff, of our care staff, of our educational assistants, the support that you gave your loved ones was tremendous... This project was successful because you all cared enough... I haven't mentioned everyone... but on behalf of all of us... thank you."

Three way cut

The ribbon was cut by grade eight student Jennifer Wales; by Wally Bunn, 1993 chairman of the Haliburton County Board of Education; and by Scott Fennell, a grade one student at the school, to enthusiastic cheers.

Also present for the occasion were the Reverend Peter Walford of Minden United Church, who gave the dedication; Doug Allen of Allen and Sherriff Architects, who designed the project; Bob Winters of IBM, involved in the cabling system for the addition; Chris Hodgson, MPP for Victoria-Haliburton; Brad Saunders, the director of education for the Haliburton board; John O'Reilley, MP for Victoria-Haliburton; Robynn Nishio of the Ministry of Education, and current board chairman Lloyd Griffiths, who emceed the ceremony.

Griffiths said all those present, should be congratulated.

"Everyone that was introduced," said Griffiths, "had a hand — either directly or indirectly — in bringing to fruition a long, long process of getting this building to where it is now. What's happened hasn't been the work of any one person or any group of persons."

Speaking for the architects, Allen presented the shovel used to break earth on the project, to Bunn and a montage of plans and elevations to the school, and a symbolic gold key to Forgrave.

On behalf of IBM, Winters presented Forgrave with a plaque commemorating the installation of the cabling system.

Education is the key

Hodgson said it was good to see tax dollars put to such a purpose. He said, "There is a consensus in our society that education is the key to our future... it is apparent to most people in society that we are entering a global economy, and that education is more important now than it has ever been to our country's future."

Hodgson also read greetings on behalf of the premier of Ontario, Bob Rae. From Rae's message: "Ontario boasts one of the finest education systems in the world, and I expect that the Archie Stouffer Elementary School will continue this tradition of academic excellence... may your school be a source of learning, growth, and community, for generations to come."

O'Reilley presented the school with a new Canadian flag. Said O'Reilley, "I'd like to express... that we're glad to see these transfer payments are being used for things that are needed in communities."

Said Nishio, "The official opening of new school facilities is a significant event, to be celebrated by all departments responsible for this project, and particularly by all the persons who will learn and work here... I congratulate the board and the senior administration for your diligence and efforts bringing this project to a successful conclusion."

Saunders thanked and congratulated the school's staff.

"All of this moving," he said, "all of this packing... took place with a tremendous amount of good will and good cheer on behalf of the staff."

Bunn also thanked all those involved, including in particular the staff of the school, the tradesmen involved in the construction, the architects, the parents of the students, the citizens of Minden.

"It truly was a year to remember," he said. "And thank you very much."

Explaining Death to A child Is As Important As Explaining Life.

(Not To Mention As Difficult)

As parents we know it's not easy to talk with our children about the beginning of life. But what about the ending of life? Both of these are subjects equally important for them to understand.

Yet, while explaining life is often a matter of simply overcoming a little embarrassment, there's nothing embarrassing about death. Death can be a very traumatic event for a child, especially when it's not understood.

The best way to educate your child on death is to educate yourself on the subject first. That's why we've made available a variety of booklets and other information that deal with children and death.

They're yours for the asking. Simply fill out the coupon, call, or stop by, and we'll provide you with complimentary copies.

Seek ban on vehicular accessBridge, trail damage concerns ski club

by Andrew Milne

The Haliburton Nordic Trail Association is asking the Dysart municipal council for help controlling access to Glebe Park following an incident in which bridges in the park were damaged by drivers of off-road vehicles.

They are also asking the community to be aware that the vehicles are not allowed in the park.

John Teljeur, president of the association, said the damage to the bridges, which took place around the time of the Bluegrass Festival, cost between $3000 and $4000 to repair.

"We're looking at about $1500 a week for an EYC (Environmental Youth Corp) crew, and they were there for two solid weeks... plus probably about another $1000 for the lumber and any other work that had to be done there," Teljeur said.

He petitioned the municipal council, September 12, (the area is municipal land) to move a gate the municipality installed earlier to block larger vehicles. Teljeur said drivers of the vehicles are just going around it — over the lawn of the nearby museum.

The tire tracks on the lawn seem to support this.

Bruce McAdie is trail development coordinator for the association.

"Unfortunately," said McAdie, "this is not an isolated incident. It's happened before. This time happened to be particularly bad."

"There's so many access routes in here from old logging trails, old ski trails, old snowmobile trails," he said, "It's difficult to keep the four-wheelers out, including ATVs."

But he and Teljeur believe moving the gate — or putting large rocks around the edges, which is another suggestion they have made — would help to keep the larger, more destructive pickups trucks out.

McAdie said the drivers probably tear the bridges up intentionally, looking for a nice deep mud track in which to run the vehicles.

Most of the damage has been repaired now, but McAdie says some of the grooves were three or four feet deep. Standing on one of the repaired bridges, he points to a tire groove next to the bridge — about two feet deep — that is still visible.

The bridge and the bank of a nearby hill, he said, "were totally destroyed — they were a good two feet lower than they are now."

McAdie suspects the drivers of the vehicles are fully aware that they aren't supposed to be in the park.

"We've stated to the public that these trails are closed to motorized vehicles," he says, "but a lot of people seem to think it's their god-given right to destroy things."

Teljeur is also concerned about liability, should someone be hurt in the park.

"I've been saying to the local snowmobile club, the municipality of Dysart, the museum, and to our own association, that this kind of thing should be watched," he said. "There are so many precedent-setting cases which have happened throughout Ontario... someone gets hurt on municipal land, sues the municipality, and insurance costs go up. The result would be users of the park would have to be scrutinized. That means so much work for ourselves and the snowmobile club. It would be too expensive. And if they tried to pass the costs on to the associations' members it would be too expensive."

Teljeur will be meeting with the municipality about the issue September 29.

Victoria Street school celebrates 70th anniversary

By Andrew Milne

Victoria Street Public School celebrated its 70th anniversary September 17.

The red brick building opened for its first school year in September of 1924 as SS No. 3 Dysart.

Principal Judy Tomlinson-Ross said the decision to mark the 70th anniversary with a celebration was partially due to the concern that the building wouldn't be in use as a school by the 75th anniversary. The student population is rapidly outgrowing the building, which has already been expanded a number of times, and which relies on the now ubiquitous 'portables' — small, prefabricated portable classrooms — to house some of the classes. Coupled with the provincial plan to provide junior kindergarten classes in public schools, these pressures are likely to move the school board to look elsewhere for a place to house the classes now taught at Victoria Street.

The September 17 celebration consisted of an anniversary tea, which former students and staff of the school were asked to attend.

Among other guests was Greta Kellett, who attended Victoria Street on the first day it opened its doors. Also attending and speaking on their memories at Victoria Street were former directors of education J. Douglas Hodgson and Stuart Baker, former principal Ruth Gorrie, and MPP Chris Hodgson.

Said Douglas Hodgson, "When we started here... I thought the building was maybe a hundred years old. But it was only nine years old. It was a new place. And the one thing that struck me as a boy starting here was the immensity of the hall — the high ceilings. I'd never been in a building that was so awesome."

Former and current staff and students posed for a group photograph in front of the 70-year old building.

"And then thirty years later, through my work, I came to this building, and it looked so small. It hadn't changed. But I and my perspective had."

"This was a no-nonsense building," he said, "There wasn't much play except for what we organized ourselves at recess and noon-hours. We had to bring a nickel each at the beginning of the school year to buy a ball. The bats seemed to last more than one year, so we had bats free. And we took care of that ball — if the ground was wet we didn't use it because we would find it very difficult to get another nickel and another ball."

Five generations of the Hodgson family went to elementary school in Haliburton village, said the elder Hodgson. "My maternal grandmother walked from down where the hill top store is... down to Haliburton to attend the first elementary school... they had an arrangement that if it was a stormy day she could stay with [the] Lucas' [family]. Now can you imagine: you're living five miles out in the country. Your little daughter — you start her out to walk five miles to school. And if it was a stormy day you had to guess whether she would try to make it home or stay at Lucas'. There were no telephones. There was no way to get that message across."

Baker started school at Victoria Street in September 1940.

"At the back of the school there was a high wooden fence," said Baker, "about six feet high, but it seemed like a mountain. It separated the boys' yard from the girls' yard on the other side... you couldn't see through it and you couldn't climb over... Right at the edge of the bank there was a privy on the boys' side for boys and a privy on the girls' side for girls, and it would accommodate more than one person at a time. And so it became a bit of a meeting place — shorter meetings in winter than summer."

Baker first met his future wife, Dorothy, at the school.

"There were things called spelling bees in those days," said Baker. "And at least once a week you had to stand up with your group and go through this spelling bee. Now I was very poor at spelling — much better at mathematics and geography..."

"I wasn't very good at spelling and I used to look around the room to see who was," he said, "You know, make a companion of those who could spell well. And there was this girl across the room there with quite a few freckles and sort of a golden pony tail, and I thought this wouldn't be a bad idea — I can do the math and she can spell..."

"We got to know each other better in high school... And when a school provides you with an education and gives you an opportunity to find a wife at the same time it must be a good building."

"We've talked about the things that have changed in the school," said Baker. "But there is one constant: this has been a caring school — a very, very caring school for the community. And it was never shown any better than when I would come back as director of education and see (former principal) Ruth Gorrie and her group here with the children. The equipment had changed and the materials had changed, but it was the same caring atmosphere that I had enjoyed as a student. And I dare say that will continue."

Gorrie talked about her experiences as principal of the school.

"I was trying to think what makes this school so wonderful," she said, "and it comes down to the children and the parents and the teachers — the human element here."

"Every year the little ones tumble off the bus, and they're so — wiggly — and wonder-eyed. They're just like a piece of clay that you can do something with. And you either make them or break them — and we always tried to make them." "And then our parents were so good," continued Gorrie. "I've never seen children come to school so well cared-for."

Chris Hodgson talked about his memories as a student at Victoria Street.

"When dad [Doug Hodgson] mentions perspective," said the younger Hodgson, "it really strikes home. This was a big building. It had a massive staircase that led up to the principal's office — and that was Mr. Max Archer... And I'm not sure if my fear of heights came from those visits, or if I was scared to go up those stairs because of my fear of heights."

"I had the good fortune of having excellent teachers," he said later, "and I think that's what has come through here today — that for the 70 year history of Victoria Street, what has made it a caring environment to prepare our young people for further education and for the world, was the teachers and the quality."

Hodgson presented two plaques to Tomlinson-Ross to commemorate the occasion — one from himself and one from Premier of Ontario Bob Rae, after which he and Tomlinson-Ross unveiled a painting, by artist Gary Chapman, of Victoria Street's facade.

Tomlinson-Ross said it would go with the children of Victoria Street, to the new school, wherever that might be.

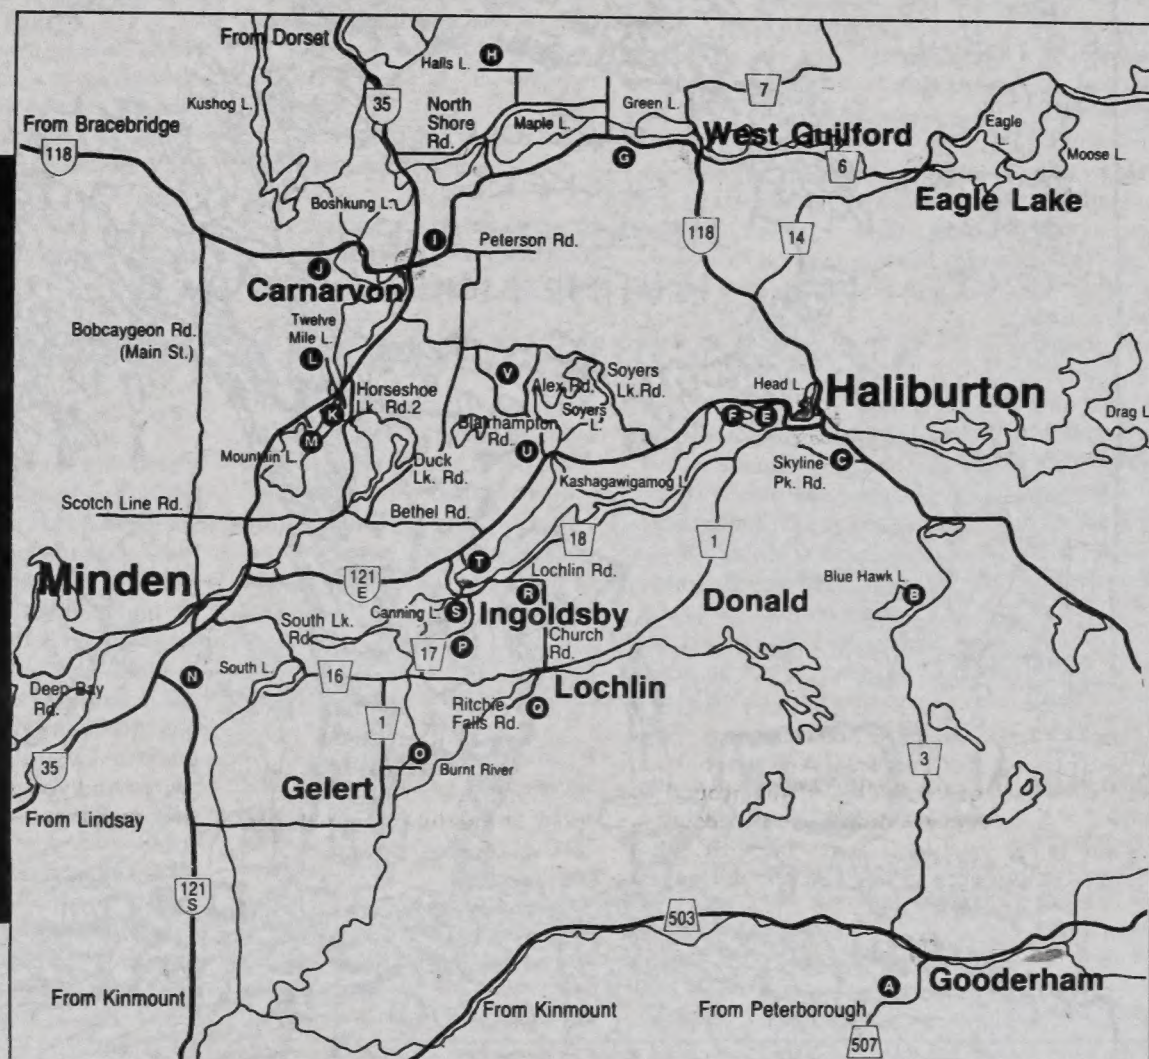

Greta Kellett attended Victoria Street on the first day it opened its doors in 1924. She later taught at the school.

Roses & thorns

--to all those who took part in the Terry Fox Run September 18. While the fund raising event is called a "run", it has been expanded to include any form of locomotion including individuals on bicycles, walking, jogging as well as running. The Minden effort even included a resident of Hyland Crest who used a walker and an unborn infant, though not officially registered, who had to be the youngest participant anywhere in a Terry Fox run. While the participants are the most visible, a great deal of organization and volunteer support ensured the event came off smoothly. Hats off as well, to the silent partners, those who reached deep in their pockets and provided the financial support and incentive for the participants. Terry's dream is alive and well in Minden.

--to the provincial government, which, according to County Council, deem the service provided by ambulance workers as vital as that of employees of the government owned liquor stores. While we agree that all sectors of the government must play a part in reducing the provincial deficit, we have to concur with the council that certain essential services, especially in rural areas, should either be exempt from the arbitrary ruling or other methods should be found to save money. The provision of emergency health care is too vital to be left solely in the hands of the accountants.

--to the schools in Minden and Haliburton which celebrated special events last week. In Minden, the addition and refurbishing of Archie Stouffer Elementary School was finally completed and officially acknowledged. It has been a long, hard struggle for all concerned but finally everyone is back under one roof. In Haliburton, one of the venerable institutions in the county, Victoria Street School, turned 70. The anniversary was marked with a celebration suitable for an institution which has served its community well. Congratulations to both.

--to those who attempt to destroy what others are building. The work of volunteers, such as that provided for the community by the Nordic Trail Club, deserves better than the treatment dished out by the senseless louts who tore up trails and bridges in Glebe Park in Haliburton.

The angels are smiling

Editor:

I have been glad to be here in Minden for the past seven years, but now more than ever.

Because of circumstances beyond my control, I had a great need for help and support.

Every person who makes the world of Minden Hospital go around, Minden Bible Church, the people who live at Staunworth Terrace, the VON's, the home care personnel, the taxi drivers and personnel, the personnel at IDA where I get my medical supplies, and the nodding acquaintances who enjoy walking as I do, have been so kind and supportive that I am heartened and strengthened to know that such precious people exist and that I am to be here for a while longer.

There is so much warmth and kindness expressed to a "L.O.L." (little old lady) that surely the angels in heaven are smiling on Minden.

May every kindness be returned to the givers full measure, pressed down and running over and may Minden shine in the hearts of all who daily come and go about their business in this fair place.

So glad to be here because of you all.

Editor:

The lone survivor from the Deep Bay Dump, "Lucky" the little white kitten, did not have the strength to go on. Friday morning we found her dead in her box. She fought hard for life.

I would like to address this letter to the person responsible for this inhumane act. We are called the superior race with a brain, sense, feelings. We take pets into our home, and we also take responsibility for them. We do not have the right to discard them like every-day garbage.

I would like to thank McMahon's Feed for the donation of half my veterinary fees of $80 for Lucky. Many thanks. I am just sad she didn't pull through.

Re: Article written by Andrew Milne (Salt blamed for Ingoldsby tree deaths), The Times, Monday Sept. 19, 1994, page 15)

When one agrees to be interviewed for a newspaper article there is always the risk or danger of being misinterpreted or having the opinions and feelings of the reporter or the paper, itself, inserted. When a concern is raised, there seems to be the necessity to find someone to blame; someone must be at fault. A concern however, does not sell newspapers... to pit one against the other (such as Minden vs. Haliburton or cottagers vs. year round residents, or landowners vs. Works Dept., etc.) seems to be the popular newspaper mode.

The Ingoldsby land owners NEVER said it's the county's fault.

It was never stated that salt was definitely blamed for Ingoldsby tree deaths nor that residents and cottagers in the Ingoldsby area are pointing fingers at Haliburton County's roads department.

I would like to emphasize that road safety is, of course, a major importance. Concerned residents are raising questions about the amount of salt used on the roads in the winter and the frequency of salting and are examining the possibility that road salt which drains towards and into the lake, might be the cause of so many dead pine trees. We are expressing our concerns and thoughts with MNR and the County Roads Committee. We are searching for a way to save the remaining pine trees and possibly prevent excessive salt from draining into Lake Kashagawigamog. We are asking questions such as: has the salt content changed over the past 2 years? Has the course or type of salt changed? Do we ever just have sand put on the road or is it always mixed with salt? We are not "blaming" or "pointing the finger"; we are not suggesting that salt should not be used. We question only the amount and frequency. One property owner has been told that his well was polluted and run-off from the road was suspected. Can we ignore this?

We know that trees live and die. What concerns us is the large number of trees that have died all within the same short time period of 12-18 months along a 1 km stretch of the South Kashagawigamog Lake Road. I counted 132 dead trees; approximately 60+ were pine trees that 1 to 1 1/2 years ago were green and alive. These pine trees were not just "old" trees... there were all stages of growth; from very young trees to very old trees.

We know that there are many causes of death for a tree;... restricted root growth,

White Pine Blister Rust, drought, diseases, infestations, extreme weather conditions, major changes in soil levels, root rot etc. But we question why so many have died all at once; why have all the trees that have died been on the same side of the road? It is known that a tree infected with White Pine Blister Rust may live for a long time... it is usually a very slow and gradual dying process. Pines are known to be able to live in very restrictive areas; on rock with a minimum of soil. Both Haliburton and Muskoka are characterized by the majestic pine on a rocky shore. There have been some minor, but not major changes in soil level in the area of these trees. We are told that if salt were the cause, the cedars would be affected. We believe that they are; we have lost 6 cedar trees on our property within the last 15 months, just for one example. We are told that there would be discolouration of foliage of cedars & pines in the Spring; we believe there was. We are not convinced that salt run-off did not play a major role in the death of these trees.

MNR states in an information (more on page 10)

Objects to MNR severance freeze

Editor:

I believe our biggest deterrent to the economy of Haliburton County is the Ministry of Natural Resources. They are not only spending millions (?), as in one instance planting a couple of 100 acres of white pine trees, they are also taking away millions and millions from the economy of the county by putting a freeze on various lakes throughout the county by not allowing any severance. They have also stopped the purchase of the 66 foot lakeshore road allowances. Why? Winter fishing?

In my situation on Kushog Lake, and this is by no means an isolated case, I have been trying, since 1990, to give three lakeshore lots to my children. I have received township, health, and Haliburton County land division approval. However, the MNR have seen fit to appeal these three approved severance and force and Ontario Municipal Board hearing. Of course this will be at our, the taxpayers', expense.

The MNR has declared Kushog Lake "a cold water lake fishery". They will allow no severance north of Ox Narrows bridge, where the deep water is. The average depth of the water south of the bridge is approximately 23 feet in the summer, and approximately 17 feet in the fall. Also, about 98 per cent of the undeveloped lakeshore on Kushog Lake is Crown Land. There are miles of this vacant land on the lake. What other lake is so fortunate?

Wouldn't it be nice to have your life savings invested in lakeshore property on say, Little Boshkung Lake, then you wake up in the morning to find the MNR has put a freeze on the lake.

However, if you had happened to choose Boshkung, or Twelve Mile Lakes, you can have severance.

Our bureaucracy is out of hand. Are our privately owned bush lands next?

Laugh 'til you cry

Humour can be dissected, as a frog can, but the thing dies in the process and the innards are discouraging to any but the scientific mind. - E.B. White

Ever stop to think how strange a phenomenon is the common, garden variety laugh?

Call it a chortle, a snicker, a guffaw, a whoop, a chuckle or a giggle, it sneaks up on you, unawares, and slam dunks you without warning. Suddenly, your belly is shaking, the corners of your lips are heading for their respective ears, and you are, whether you want to or not, laughing.

But why? Trying to define exactly what is funny is like trying to braid a rope out of smoke. One man's Wayne is another man's Shuster. Some people think David Letterman is the funniest man on the planet.

Others think he's a tiresome, nasty smart-ass.

Some people love The Three Stooges. Others line up for Victor Borge.

And the French?

The French actually believe that Jerry Lewis is funny. More — they think he's a comedic genius. They've honoured him with the Gallic equivalent of a knighthood. The French look at his cross-eyed, knock-kneed, buck-toothed, half-witted screen persona and they fall in les aisles.

Go figure.

Canadians? It's hard to say exactly where Canadians fit in the Pantheon of Humour. We have Stephen Leacock of course. And there aren't too many funnier writers than W.O. Mitchell or Bill Kinsella when they put their jester's caps on. And of course we export a very high grade of comic artists. Rich Little, John Candy, Dan Ackroyd, Dave Thomas, Martin Short, David Steinberg — Canucks to a man. But 'export' is the operative word. None of those comics got famous in Canada. They had to go south for certification.

Maybe they should have gone to Japan. My spies tell me that a brand new religion is sweeping the Land of the Rising Sun. It's called Taisokyo. The only commandment in the Gospel according to Taisokyo is that you must laugh. At everything. That includes floods, fires, famine, bankruptcy, disease and traffic accidents. The two million Japanese who follow Taisokyo can be kicked out of the church for not laughing uproariously at death and disaster.

Your typical Taisokyo funeral is not quite what you'd see down at the local cathedral or synagogue either. Funeral guests come with cream pies to push in the faces of mourning family members. Says one Taisokyo disciple, "If we feel like it, we draw a moustache in the face of the corpse and even set fire to the casket."

I guess you have to be there ... And then there's Britain's entry into the Humour Sweepstakes.

His name is Magnus. He's a computer created by a team of twenty computer engineers at Imperial College, in London.

But Magnus is not your average battery-run agglomeration of wire and plastic and silicon chips. The boffins who created Magnus claim to have built a 'neural-computer brain' very close to the one we all carry around on our shoulders.

Magnus thinks, suffers emotions and even dabbles in free will, say his creators.

Aha, but can Magnus take a joke? More to the point, can Magnus tell a joke?

Igor Aleksander, the engineer in charge, admits that Magnus is no, well, Charlie Farquharson.

"If you ask Magnus to tell you a joke," he says, "it may say, 'Okay, here is a joke.' Then it will say, 'Now can we get back to business?'"

Yeah, well. The French would probably eat it up.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Fall is always a time for taking stock and preparing for what we hope will be a busy season ahead. The same is true for the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce. Notices have gone out announcing the organization's annual meeting, scheduled for October 11, 7:30 a.m. at Wigamog Inn. In addition to the usual year-end reports, the meeting will see the election of a new executive for the coming year and presentation of awards for the Highlander of the Year and the Citizen of the Year. President Brian Dean said they will be striving for a more relaxed tone at this meeting to give people a greater opportunity to socialize.

The Chamber has also asked for the assistance of its members in manning (and "womanning") their booth at the Markham Snowmobile Show October 14, 15 and 16. They are looking for people who can spare a couple of hours time to promote the Haliburton Highlands as a winter destination. If you can help out, call the Chamber office at 286-1760.

THE TIMES

If you don't mind, we'll blow our own horn for a minute....The Times was awarded first place for general excellence in the advertising awards competition sponsored by the Ontario Community Newspapers Association. This newspaper also captured special awards for use of graphic illustrations, general advertising layout and page design and blending. The competition is sponsored by the association which represents community newspapers across the province and judges entries based on their circulation group. "I am particularly pleased we have received this recognition," publisher Jack Brezina commented. "It reflects the effort members of our creative team put into designing the advertising which appears in this newspaper."

Trees and salt

mation sheet titled "How to Kill Your Tree", "Use salt around your trees in the winter". On a sheet titled "How to Keep Your Trees Healthy" it states "Avoid or minimize the use of salt around your trees".

So... we discuss and search for a way to save the remaining pine trees on this picturesque stretch of road in Ingoldsby. There will always be those who criticize but only a few that will take some form of action and try to find solutions.

Finally... I want it known that the County Roads Dept. does a fine job of maintaining our roads, especially in the winter. We appreciate it. I also thank the County Roads Committee for allowing me the time to make a presentation on this issue and thank the many people who supported me. That presentation was made on Tuesday, Sept. 20, 1994 at 7:00 pm in the County Engineer's office (contrary to The Times article). Also, LKO stands for "Lake Kashagawigamog Organization" and is supported by property owners on and near Lake Kashagawigamog including both year round residents and cottagers. It is not, as reported, solely a cottagers' organization.

Firearms legislation major concern raised at HHOA annual meeting

by Jerry Grozelle

Close to a hundred members of the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association were assured by both their local MP and MPP that their political representatives will be working on their behalf in regard to gun control legislation.

Although they represent different parties, on different levels of government, Chris Hodgson and John O'Reilly are united in their support for the legitimate gun owner.

O'Reilly, the Victoria-Haliburton MP, told the audience that he is a gun collector himself.

"I'm not planning to hold up a Beckers store," he said, adding that he sometimes feels that because he is a firearms owner he is treated the same as those who would rob a store.

O'Reilly said that he has become friends with Justice Minister Allan Rock and he is continuing to try to convince Rock that more controls on the legitimate firearms owners will do nothing to control violent crime.

The local MP admitted that he has to walk a fine line so as not to appear to be leaning too far one way on the issue.

"I'm on your... our... side regarding the FAC (firearms acquisition certificate) issue," he said.

MPP Chris Hodgson told an appreciative audience, "gun control as crime control is a lie. We're not talking about the American way here."

Hodgson compared the notion that gun control would curb crime, to someone losing his keys on a dark street and going a hundred yards down the road to a street light to look for them. It is obvious that the keys are somewhere down the dark road, but it is easier to look for them near the street light.

Dr. Terry Quinney of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters was another guest speaker.

"You have a very important and worthwhile organization here in Haliburton," he said.

Quinney encouraged the audience to write or phone their elected representatives, Justice Minister Allan Rock and Prime Minister Jean Chretien to voice their concerns about gun controls.

He also appealed to people who aren't already members, to join the OFAH to give that organization a stronger voice to deal with the issues that threaten their chosen outdoors activities.

"You are fortunate to have John and Chris as your elected representatives," Quinney said. "But don't leave it up to them alone. There are people in this government who want to take all your firearms away. Rock wants universal registration of all firearms. He says he's waiting to see how much it's going to cost to implement."

Gun controls target wrong people

Quinney urged everyone to get involved in a letter writing campaign.

"Let them know you are not going to tolerate universal registration of firearms," he said. "Don't leave it up to the person next to you. They (government officials) need to hear it every day of the week."

Quinney said that statistics clearly show that law-abiding citizens are not the problem.

"If we don't act now," he said, "we may see an end to our hunting heritage."

The provincial government has opened negotiations with the native people of the Williams Treaty area.

"The issue of special hunting and fishing rights (for native people) was voluntarily solved many years ago with the Williams Treaty — equality under the conservation laws," Quinney said. "The treaty was upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada. I think the Supreme Court should be the ultimate authority."

The OFAH representative accused the provincial government, and Natural Resources Minister Howard Hampton in particular, of lying to the OFAH and deliberately misleading the federal government on the Williams Treaty issue.

"Hampton has no right to initiate something contrary to the highest court in the land," Quinney said.

Public consultations are under way to get people's opinions on the matter of native hunting and fishing rights. One of the options is to keep the provisions of the Williams Treaty and not allow any special privileges. He encouraged everyone to support that option.

"We (the OFAH) are trying really hard to represent your interests," Quinney said. "But we need your help. Don't be afraid to write to the MNR, your MPP, your MP or even the Prime Minister."

Other issues that Quinney spoke about included the MNR's trout management proposals, as well as deer, moose and black bear management.

There was one MNR official whose presence was welcome at the meeting. Al Wainio of the MNR's Resource Stewardship and Development Branch is in charge of the Canadian Fisheries Involvement (CFIP) program.

CFIP is the program that provided funds to the HHOA for the trout spawning bed rehabilitation projects in Kennis Lake in 1993 and Gull Lake this summer.

Wainio has worked for the MNR for 34 years, the last 13 as co-ordinator of CFIP. He is really enthusiastic about CFIP, saying that it is the "best fisheries program in the province, by far." He added it is the only program that is doing anything beneficial for the fishery.

"It's working, thanks to you people," he said. "It's the only program that hasn't been cut back (in funding)."

CFIP has half a million dollars a year available to clubs and individuals for fisheries projects, but there is an $8,000 ceiling on each project.

"I'm always amazed at the ingenuity of clubs to raise the extra money for projects over $8,000," he said.

Wainio gave a slide presentation showing some of the projects that CFIP has helped to fund across the province.

The last order of the day's meeting was the election of the directors for the coming year. A total of 24 people were chosen, by a membership vote, as directors for 1994-95. They will meet in October to elect the people who will serve on the executive from among those 24 directors.

Tennis lessons: Tennis instructor Jack Richardson helps an Archie Stouffer Elementary School student improve her game. More lessons for school students are planned. Several racquets have been donated so the students will have the equipment they need.

Junior soccer

Scoreless draw: The Haliburton Highlands Secondary School junior boys soccer team duelled to a 0-0 draw against the Fenelon Falls Falcons last Wednesday afternoon in Fenelon Falls. There were some close scoring opportunities, including a shot that went over the open Fenelon goal late in the game. The Haliburton boys gave up a 1-0 loss to the Lindsay Collegiate Spartans in their season opener on September 16.

Senior Redmen soccer team wins two straight

The senior Redmen boys' soccer team opened its season with a come-from-behind 3-2 victory over the Lindsay Collegiate Spartans.

The game, in Haliburton, saw the Redmen fall behind twice, only to tie it up after both Lindsay goals. The Redmen notched a late goal, with less than five minutes left in the game, to grab the victory.

Early in the first half, after a shaky start, the Redmen settled down and came up with a very strong finish.

"The first win augurs well for the remainder of the season, as this is a relatively young team," says coach Walter Tose. "Yet, already they show considerable raw talent and character."

All 18 members of the team contributed to the win.

"Special mention should go to Mike Morrison, Jonathan Bishop and Ryan Goodall for an outstanding effort," Tose said. "And to newcomers Jon Hebert and Scott Bacon in a fine debut."

Bishop, Andrew Wilbee and Goodall were the goal scorers.

The Redmen added a second win to their 1994 record last Wednesday with a 2-1 victory over the Fenelon Falls Falcons.

Haliburton opened a 2-0 lead but began to tire as the game advanced. Fenelon closed the gap to 2-1 but the Redmen held on for the win.

Haliburton's first goal saw halfback Nathan Gibbons cross to Rich Simmons, who kicked the ball out of the air to put a looping shot over the Fenelon goalkeeper.

Jonathan Bishop set up the second goal with a perfect corner kick to Mike Morrison, who headed it into the Falcons' goal.

Coach Tose praised his squad for its teamwork.

"They played quite well," he said. "Everybody contributed."

Tose singled out Morrison, Bishop and Ryan Goodall for their outstanding efforts. He also commended goalkeeper Roberto Guerra for a strong game between the pipes. Guerra is an exchange student from Mexico and he has had some experience playing soccer there.

Bog racers make mud fly in Gelert

by Jerry Grozelle

If you looked closely you may have seen a familiar face or two at the Gelert Mud Bog Races on the September 17 and 18 weekend. A couple of the competitors are regulars at some of the big events in the United States. Many of those races are telecast on The Nashville Network (TNN).

Racers were vying for close to $5,000 in prize money.

Organizer Bill Linington said he was a little disappointed with the turnout of spectators. He hopes that as the event becomes better known, it will draw a larger number of fans. An estimated 250 spectators took in the event over the two and a half days.

"It's a learning process for me," Linington said. "I'd like to keep it going."

Mud bog racers from as far as New York State competed in five classes over the weekend.

A total of 77 runs kept spectators entertained throughout the weekend.

The Saturday events saw George Martorino of Cobourg take first place in the Street Stock division. Derrick Inwood of Little Britain was second. Third went to Alan Martorino of Cobourg. Jim Bryan of Bewdley was fourth and fifth went to Louise Jackson of Huntsville.

The Super Stock class saw David Kidd of Whitby capture first place. Kathy Sagriff of Erinsville was second. Third was won by Shawn Hoskin of Blackstock. Telly Serroul of Oshawa was fourth and fifth went to George Martorino of Cobourg.

Ken Snow of Orono took top honours in Saturday's Pro Stock run. Bob DeJager of Bowmanville was second. Carl Arnburg of Newcastle took third. Fourth went to Helgy Gundamunson of Peterborough and Ross Kamrath of Campbellcroft was fifth.

Saturday's Super Modified class was won by Lester Crump of Basher Falls, New York. Todd John of Shannonville was second. Third went to Blair Conway of Port Perry. There was a two-way tie for fourth between Jack Wanninkhof of Port Perry and Ken Snow of Orono.

Ben Nieuwenhuis of Newcastle was first in the Open class. Todd John of Shannonville was second. Steve Gardner of Basher Falls, New York was third, Jack Wanninkhof of Port Perry was fourth and Danny Meisner of Oshawa was fifth.

Sunday's events saw some new names in the winner's circle. George Martorino was first in the street stock event again. Louise Jackson took second place. Third went to Alan Martorino. Gord Hunter of Tweed placed fourth and fifth went to Derrick Inwood.

The Super Stock category saw Telly Serroul finish with the best time. David Kidd was second. Third place went to Shawn Hoskin. Paul Warren of Keswick was fourth and fifth went to Donna Henderson of Oshawa.

First in Sunday's Pro Stock event was captured by Bob DeJager. Carl Arnburg of Newcastle was second. Ken Snow placed third. Kevin Lee of Bowmanville was fourth and Tammy Cook of Stouffville was fifth.

The Super Modified class on Sunday was won by David Kresconko of Buffalo, New York.

Basher Falls, New York native Lester Crump was second. Third went to Todd John of Shannonville. Blair Conway of Port Perry was fourth and Ken Snow of Orono was fifth.

David Kresconko also took top honours in Sunday's Open class. Ben Nieuwenhuis was second. Steve Gardner of Basher Falls was third. Jack Wanninkhof was fourth and Danny Meisner was fifth.

Don't spare the horsepower: A competitor powers his way through the course during the Street Stock class at the Gelert Mud Bog Races on the September 17 and 18 weekend. An estimated 250 spectators turned out to watch the event.

Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters offers expertise to councils

by Jerry Grozelle

A letter from Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters Executive Vice-President Rick Morgan was received by County Council and filed for future reference.

In the letter, Morgan explained that the federation represents 70,000 individual members and 490 clubs, many of whom reside within Haliburton County. He requested that the county contact the federation for its input before making any motions or resolutions or taking any actions relating to firearms. He explained that the federation "represents a large number of citizens who own and use firearms in an ethical, safe and law-abiding fashion."

"We are also the organization which introduced province-wide hunter safety training in the 1950s," Morgan explained. "Hundreds of our members continue to run courses in the safe and responsible ownership and use of firearms."

Morgan states that many of the federation's members reside in Haliburton County and they are concerned about self-interest groups with anti-firearm agendas.

"These small groups are known to occasionally approach municipal councils with a request for endorsement of philosophies or actions," Morgan continued. "To persons unfamiliar with hunting, target shooting or the ownership and use of firearms, these resolutions and requests may seem well-intentioned, innocuous or even a good idea."

With the offer to provide an opinion on behalf of the legitimate firearms owners of the county, Morgan said: "A great deal of expertise exists within our membership, Board of Directors and staff. We would be pleased to make it available to you so that you have a more balanced base, a truly factual base, on which to make your decisions."

Lawn bowlers score nine-ender!

What a team: A perfect nine-ender in lawn bowling doesn't come along very often. But last Thursday, this trio scored the elusive nine-ender at the Minden Lawn Bowling Club. Skip Don Sinclair is flanked by team members Betty Hardman (left) and Barbara Walker.

September is always a busy month at the Lawn Bowling Club.

On the ninth, the annual golf tournament took place at Beaverbrook Golf Course. Thirty some members participated. At 2:00 other member met at the Club House and played a variety of card games.

Delicious hamburgers, hot dogs, salads and desserts were served at the club House at 5:00. Following dinner, the golf trophy was presented to the winners, Ross Farr, Vi Howell and Barbara Walker. Many lucky draws were made, so quite a few went home as winners. Everyone who attended the special fun day had a great time. Thanks to all who worked hard to make the day such a success.

On September 16 the annual fall meeting was held at the Club House. The meeting was well attended due to publicity by Cy Heal and phone calls made by Gerry Ryan. Barbara Walker, John Mackey and Eleanor Crane were elected as the three new directors. Following the general meeting, the directors met to appoint the president. Eleanor Crane will be taking over as the new president. A hearty vote of thanks to retiring president, Ross Farr, and his executive for all they did to make 1994 such a great year.

It seldom happens, but it did on September 19. Don Sinclair, Barbara Walker and Betty Hardman won a nine ender that gave them a one point advantage over their opponents.

On September 23, lawn bowlers from Beaverton will be our guests.

The dinner, to close the 1994 season, is to be held October 5 at 5:30 p.m. at the Red Umbrella Inn. If you have never lawn bowled, consider joining us next year.

Last chance for cottage exemption

If you own a cottage, you should take note of a recent tax change. This year's federal budget eliminated the $100,000 lifetime capital gains exemption. That's the exemption you could claim to reduce the taxes you'd have to pay on your capital gains.

If you sell your cottage for more than it cost you, the difference is considered to be a capital gain. You will have to report this amount on your income tax return.

You don't even have to sell your property to realize a capital gain. If you give your cottage away, Revenue Canada considers you to have sold it and, if it's worth more than you paid for it, you'll still have to report any capital gain on your income tax return.

Although the budget eliminated the exemption for property sold after February 22, 1994, if you haven't already used up your $100,000 exemption, you'll have one more chance to benefit from it. You don't have to sell or give away your property to do so.

You can file an "election" with your 1994 income tax return to report the capital gain that you earned on your cottage before March 1, 1992. The 1992 budget had already eliminated the exemption for capital gains on cottages. Should you file an election?

Basically, by filing an election, you're reducing any capital gain that you may have when you eventually sell or give away your cottage. As a result, the income tax you'd have to pay in that year will also be reduced.

Even though most cottage owners would benefit from filing an election, it is your choice. And, it is important to note that if you do file an election, the amount of capital gains you report will be added to your 1994 net income. If the unused portion of your $100,000 exemption is more than the gain you elect to report, you will usually not have to pay tax on this amount.

However, filing an election may reduce the amount of some of your benefits and credits which are based on net income. These include the Child Tax Benefit; the goods and services tax credit; the guaranteed income supplement; provincial tax credits; and some non-refundable tax credits such as the age amount and medical expenses.

It may subject you to a minimum tax, increase some provincial taxes, and require you to repay all or part of any social benefits you received in 1994, such as Old Age Security pension benefits. You may also have to pay your 1995 income tax by instalments.

You should compare the amount you will lose in benefits and credits over the next year to the amount you will save in income tax when you eventually dispose of your cottage. If you rely heavily on benefits and credits, you should review your personal situation and decide what is more favourable to you before filing the election. Remember that if you choose not to file the election, when you do eventually sell your cottage, your benefits and credits may be affected and you'll likely have to pay tax on the capital gain at the time.

If you think you might want to file an election, you can pick up an information package which includes the election form from your local income tax office in late December. In the meantime, there is something you could do now to make filing your election easier.

Estimating the value of your cottage is the way to begin. You'll need a reasonable estimate of what your cottage could have sold for on February 22, 1994, if it had been for sale. You should get this estimate as soon as possible since this may become more difficult as time passes.

You do not have to obtain a professional appraisal of your property. Instead, you can find this information in real estate pamphlets or newspapers which list the prices of similar cottages in the same area. Provincial land registry or land time offices could also provide information on actual sale prices of similar properties. Keep a record of the information you used to estimate your cottage's fair market value, or a copy of the professional appraisal in case Revenue Canada asks.

If you need more information on capital gains and your cottage, please call Revenue Canada in Toronto at 954-3186 for help. (This article was prepared by Revenue Canada.)

Home Buying 101

Let's say you're out looking for a home and you're wondering how to get the most bang for your buck. With a proud sigh and swelling chest, and armed with a nice downpayment, you begin to calculate the monthly payment you can afford to carry.

HOLD ON! Before you just add up principal, interest and taxes BE AWARE there is another factor that should be considered in your calculations, and that is ENERGY. Whether you heat with wood, propane, oil, hydro or combination thereof, your annual energy bill can drain hundreds (if not thousands) from your pocket. This money can (and should) be diverted to useful purposes and not sent up the chimney.

Let's look at this from another angle: every dollar you save in energy can be applied to more of the permanent components of your mortgage mix: taxes, principal, or interest. Just ask any banker - because they will ask you first.

The 912 sq. ft. home featured above is an R2000 specification home with full insulated basement, two bedrooms, main floor laundry, drilled well, zero clearance fireplace, heat recovery ventilator, individual thermostats, thermopane windows, and all the other upgrades you might be tempted to add to an older home. It is located about a mile from town on a level lot in a nice residential neighbourhood, and priced at $95,000.00

While at first blush this may seem a lot for the home, consider this FACT: the significant energy savings this home allows will let you pay more for the things that matter most to you.

So... if you had a $10,000 down payment and were shopping for a home in the sub-$100,000 category, this home represents far better value than an energy glutton at a lower price.

It's your money!

Conference will explore aspects of play therapy

by Andrew Milne

Social workers, educators, resource teachers, day care workers, and others from across Canada and the United States will be meeting at Pinestone October 6-7 for a conference on a psychological technique known as play therapy.

The conference, called "Communication Through Play", is co-sponsored by SIRCH (Supportive Initiatives for Residents of Haliburton County) and by Kinark, which does psychological testing, psychiatric consultation and counselling for children and families.

"Play therapy," says Karoul Talaba, a psychometrist who provides psychological services for Kinark, "is a way of understanding children's feelings and behaviour by observing the manner in which they play with toys and are able to reflect their emotions."

"It's used a lot by mental health professionals, by hospital staff in preparing children for trauma, and also by parents who need to be able to reach their children but not through words," says Talaba.

The technique was made famous by a Dr. Virginia Axline, who wrote the book Dibs: In Search of Self, in the 1960s. Dibs is the case history of a very disturbed young child (Dibs), whom the author was able to treat with play therapy. After two years in school, the child showed a host of disturbing symptoms — he would sit through an entire morning without moving or saying a word, or would crawl around on the floor, apparently entirely unaware of the other children present or of the teacher. It was unclear whether he had perhaps suffered brain damage at birth or was suffering from a mental illness.

Axline used play therapy to draw the child out of himself. Says Talaba, "it (the book) goes through all the sessions talking about how much he was able to learn about himself... there was a lot of self-esteem building. He learned to really enjoy the play sessions and to enjoy her as a person and to translate that into the classroom. By the end of it they found out he was really bright — the school was able to test him."

The conference will address a number of topics related to the technique. Says Talaba, "One speaker in particular is addressing how to play with the developmentally handicapped, which is something which we haven't really done a lot of work in... Another speaker is addressing play with autistic children, which would be very different, because some of the autistic children are non-verbal."

This is the first time Kinark has been able to organize a conference of this magnitude in Haliburton. "Generally speaking conferences of this magnitude and importance have been presented in Toronto in big hotels," says Talaba. "We have attendance from all over the province and we have people coming from the states. This is really the first time we've tried to centralize it by putting it in Haliburton."

Speakers at the conference will be Dr. Louise Guernsey, Ph.D., a professor at Penn State University and licensed clinical psychologist who has published a number of books and articles on play therapy; Dr. Henry Leland, Ph.D., a professor of psychology at Ohio State with 30 years experience teaching and practising the therapy; and Dr. Atilla Turgay, M.D., chief of child and adolescent psychiatry at Scarborough General.

Places are still open at the conference. Fees are $195 for two days, $100 for one day, and $115 for students for two days. Contact Kinark for details.

Politicians are relieved

No new rules for this year's winter fishing

Haliburton County Warden Jim McMahon and Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Bern Berry are among those who are claiming a victory of sorts. Both men, along with many others, campaigned against the implementation of the Ministry of Natural Resources lake trout and brook trout management proposals.

The ministry has advised that "since it will take considerable time to collect and analyze all the questionnaires and comments received, we would like to advise there will be no changes to regulations affecting the 1995 winter ice fishing season."

McMahon said this is not the time to be risking more of an economic strain on the county. He cited the proposed closing of some snowmobile trails by forest owners because of the cancellation of the forest management tax rebate as one problem that has to be dealt with before the county suffers another economic blow.

He says the postponement of the ministry's decision making process is the direct result of sitting down and talking about the impact on the economy.

"We've won a victory on the trout situation," McMahon said. "The impact would have been devastating."

Berry warns stakeholders not to be lulled into complacency by the delay. He said that those affected by the trout management proposals should keep in tune with what is happening and insist on being informed about the ministry's analysis of the data collected. "We need to be kept apprised of the situation," he said.

In its submission to the ministry regarding the trout management strategy, the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association specifically asked for a one-year postponement of the decision. Association directors suggested that the process was moving too fast to give due consideration to alternatives that were not included in the ministry's options.

Exchange includes visit to Amsterdam

Goede dag! Hello from Holland. Everything here is fine. I am enjoying myself quite a bit.

This past weekend I was in Amsterdam. It is really big and crowded. The 'red light district' was very crowded and is everything I thought it would be. I don't plan on going back there soon. I'll leave it to other people.

I met all the other exchange students this past weekend. Some people were being reunited and some people were new and so we went through introductions again. There were students from Argentina, Mexico, Brazil, South Africa, Indonesia, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, U.S.A. and of course Canada. Everyone is really nice and we all get along great.

Language school was great. I had a lot of fun and I even learned something.

School is very different here. The school puts no emphasis on sports at all. It is all very academic. There are many different levels at which you can be enrolled. I am in the program called HAV04. I have the classes wiskunde A (math), biologie, filosofie (philosophy), tekenen (drawing), handvaardigheid (arts and crafts), Dutch, French and English and maatshappyleer (social studies). I like all of my classes except for the fact that I don't understand everything the teachers say, but I am learning. The school is also very large. It has 1700 students. It seems very impersonal.

I switched host families at the end of August. My host parents are Ties and Hens Wierda. Ties is a police officer and Hens works part time in a laboratory. Rani is my only sister and she is 17. André is 15, Frans-Willem is 13 and Riemer is 11. They are my younger brothers. They are a very nice family and have welcomed me into their family very warmly. I switch families again at the end of November, right before Christmas.

Anyway, Tot ziens.

Local motorcyclists Jim and Bernie Davis were at the head of the line during a tour in the Highlands September 18. Motorcyclists from throughout the area took part in the event which was held in memory of Canning Lake resident, Vern McCullough, who died earlier this summer in a collision at highways 121 and 35.

Ride in memory of Canning Lake motorcyclist

Harley Davidson motorcycle owners from Durham, Scarborough, Richmond Hill, Muskoka and the Haliburton Highlands gathered to ride in memory of Vern McCullough September 18.

McCullough, of Canning Lake, lost his life June 26 while at the intersection of Highways 35 and 121 in Minden, while riding his motorcycle. McCullough was preparing to go to Huntsville that morning and lead the Muskoka chapter of the Harley Owners Group back to Minden where they would meet up with other chapters being led north by his nephew Jim McCullough of Richmond Hill.

That original ride never took place. However all local riders wished to complete Vern's run, and it was rescheduled for September 18.

Total motorcycle participation in the ride to the loop and back included three Hondas, one Yamaha, one BMW, and 57 Harley-Davidsons.

Local riders included Jim and Bernie Davis, their daughter Deneena, Ted Robinson, and Bob Mann.

Diana McCullough and her daughter Maureen joined the group for a corn roast Saturday evening at the farm of Jim and Bernie Davis, and were present Sunday morning at the Brown Owl restaurant for breakfast, and later, at Skyline Park, Haliburton, took photos.

Plans to make Vern's run an annual event in the Highlands have yet to be determined.

LOCAL HANDCRAFTS

Filling in the family tree

by June Partridge

Summer is over and I wonder how many genealogists were able to find some more clues that can take them back one more generation in their family tree? How many of you attended family reunions? How many of you attended the OGS Seminar in North Bay? How many of you did some research in your area of origin?

I have been able to determine that one of the original Berczy settlers in Markham married into my family of Mennonite background and now I have a contact person.

A friend attended her family reunion in Peterborough this summer for the Stuart family. One hundred and ten people attended. A new branch of the family was located and some errors were corrected in the research that had already been published in two family history books. A third book is now a gleam in the eye of the two sisters who have been working on their 'tree' for many years. Family memorabilia loaned to the museum was on display while other articles were on display at the event. The family Bible was read at the Anglican service by one of the descendants who is a minister.

One of the members of the Haliburton Genealogical Group attended the OGS Seminar in June and learned how to best obtain oral histories from family members. She also took in the publishing seminar. She caught the excitement of discovery in the interaction with other genealogists and exchanged addresses with those of similar interests. The book tables of the many branches of OGS were her biggest downfall when she found so many books that she wanted to buy and couldn't resist.

For those of you who stayed in the area of home this summer, many opportunities were available right here to whet your appetite for getting back on track with your own research. The Haliburton Echo's County Life looked into Old Fashioned School Days and the history of the Old Bobcaygeon Road as well as other historical topics. SummerTimes explored the Rail Line and more, The Echo had a wonderful look at the history of the Barnardo Children and descendants living right here.

I wonder how many of the people I meet who tell me that they are 'doing their tree' may not have read even their local paper that might have held important clues to their past? If a clue isn't found, then an idea for a different direction could pop into your head as you read how someone else found their clues. Have you visited our two local museums to get a feel for the way our ancestors lived? Sometimes the knowledge of the era can give an idea of where to look for the missing piece of information. Have you looked at the resources in the Minden Library for local history as well as newsletters of several OGS branches and other publications?

The Haliburton Genealogical group meets four times a year on the last Wednesday evening of April, June, September and November at the Minden Library. All people who are interested in getting together to ask questions and look for new ways of expanding your search are welcome to come and bring your ideas and your questions to our meetings. We publish a newsletter and link people who are researching similar names. If you need a ride to the meeting, please let us know. Our address is Box 567, Minden, Ontario. K0M 2K0. Come out and let us help you. We can struggle together and share our triumphs together.

Tuesday morning Pastor Fast conducted the chapel service. The usual residents were in attendance to enjoy pastor Fast's message. Thank you Pastor Fast.

In the afternoon crafts were held under the leadership of Dottie Muirhead and Donna Wallace. While Doris and Linda took residents for a bus ride.

aided a few residents to go out for lunch. We went to the Subway. Six of us had submarine sandwiches there, but the bus residents went to Pike's Peak to have their sandwiches. We all met at Pike's Peak and went out South Lake Road, then around to Ingoldsby General Store for ice cream and then home. Many thanks to Dorie McAllister and Linda Fry who followed the bus with their cars.

Thursday was the regular tea party. It was hosted by the Kinmount Baptist Church Ladies. They served a delicious tea and had an entertaining program. The ladies were Doris Barkwell, Joan Berry, Neal Berry, Dawn Wilson and Marion McDonald.

On Friday's Happy Hour, everyone was very disappointed as Fran Hart was unable to be here with her performing birds, but we had a sing song with Doris and the volunteers and everyone had a very happy time. The volunteers were Bonnie Fullan, Donna Wallace, Ellen Holden, Don Holden, Pearl Cowen, Loreen Swinson, and Dottie Muirhead.

In search of a good night's sleep

(Staff from Kinark Child and Family Services, Infant Development Program, have answered the following questions on family matters. If you have a subject you would like to see discussed, write to: Family Matters, c/o Kinark, Haliburton, Ontario, K0M 1S0.)

Q: My child is eight months old and has never slept through the night. I am exhausted! We rock her to sleep, and put her in her crib, but she only stays asleep for two or three hours and wakens crying every two hours all night. We have to rock her to sleep every time.

A: Sounds like you're ready for a good night's sleep yourself. From what you say, it appears that your child associates going to sleep with being rocked. This is no problem if you are comfortable with doing this at bedtime and naptime. What is probably happening during the night is that she has partial wakings between sleep cycles (normal for all of us, although we seldom remember them), but the condition she associated with falling back to sleep, rocking is not present. She will not learn to fall asleep by herself, so she must wake you up to help her.

The trick is to develop a bedtime routine which may include rocking, nursing, a story, or whatever suits you and your child, but which ends with her going to sleep in her bed by herself with whatever conditions will still be present when she has partial wakings during the night.

Helping her learn to go to sleep by herself has to be gradual. As with all learning, there may be some discomfort at first, but she should not feel abandoned. So you will not want to "just let her cry it out". Making sure that she gets lots of cuddles and closeness during the day, and that the time before bedtime is calm and friendly, you can then tuck her in and say goodnight. Assure her - and yourself - that this is a useful new skill to learn, and that you will support her in learning. Decide on a length of time that you can tolerate before going in to check that she is OK; five minutes is a good start. When you go in, verbally reassure her, express your confidence in her learning ability, lay her down if possible, repeat your good nights, and leave. Now wait ten minutes and repeat the check if necessary. Do not pick her up or give her a bottle or pacifier. If she can replace the pacifier herself that's fine, but for safety's sake, never leave it on a cord. If she is still protesting,

Family Matters

by Kinark Staff

check again after 15 minutes, and repeat at 15 minute intervals until she falls asleep during one of the intervals. If she wakens during the night, repeat the procedure from the five minute check.

Sounds like a lot of work? It is, and well worth it. You may have one or two nights of hard work, but in all likelihood that will be all that is needed to help her relearn.

Q: What can I do to stop my two-year-old from biting? She's a wonderful, busy, sociable toddler, and I certainly don't want to bite her back as some have suggested, but I don't know what else to do.

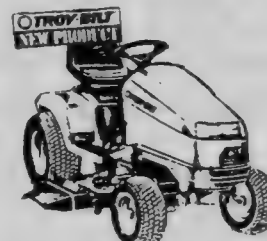

A: Congratulations for resisting the conventional "bite-em-back" cure. This only teaches that it's all right to hurt someone if they're smaller than you.

When children use biting as a strategy, it is usually for a short time, and the most effective way to deal with it is not to let it happen. Much more easily said than done, of course. But do consider, for a time, supervising very closely when she is with other children. This will give you the opportunity to offer positive feedback when she is playing in friendly ways (be specific: "I like how you gave that block to Leah") and also to observe when she is getting close to the level of frustration where she may bite. At that point, you can divert the play or at least physically prevent teeth-to-skin contact. At the same time, you can make note of conditions that may set the stage for her frustration, be they too many children, teasing by other children, close to mealtime or naptime, etc. make sure that the adults around her do not model aggressive behaviour. As with any problem behaviour, prevention is much easier than the consequences. Mentally check for other stresses in her life, e.g. new daycare, toilet training, new baby etc. You can experiment with ways of helping your child to have more of a say in these situations.

Your two-year-old's reasoning ability is limited, so keep the consequences simple and direct and immediate. Remove her from the child who was bitten, tell her "No biting" or another short sharp reprimand, then make sure that the child who was bitten gets comforted. Too much attention to the biting may increase it.

Reassure yourself that as her frustration level decreases and her verbal and social skills increase, this too shall pass.

The sustainable development trap

In 1987, after years of work, a United Nations Committee headed by Norway's prime minister, Gro Harlem Brundtland, completed its report on the environment and development.

Published as "Our Common Future", it described in bleak detail, the assault on the life support systems of the planet, by our species. The report urged that the earth and its productivity must be protected and nurtured for all future generations.

Henceforth, economics and the environment must be linked inseparably. Brundtland's major contribution was the phrase sustainable development that was adopted and repeated like a mantra by politicians and business people. The dictionary defines development as "gradual unfolding, fuller working out", which makes sustainable development a phrase full of insight and promise.

Unfortunately, in common usage, the meaning of development has been altered and is now synonymous with "economic growth" which in turn, is frequently equated with "progress."

While development in the dictionary sense has endless potential, limitless growth is impossible in a finite world. Brundtland's insightful document then fell into the trap and concluded that so long as sustainable development is the operative principle in all of our actions, we could protect the environment while the global economy could increase fivefold!

Economists may believe it's possible, but most scientists disagree. The demand for further economic growth in the industrialised nations is justified on the faith that wealth will trickle down to the poorer nations.

Yet, during the period of unprecedented economic growth from the '50's to the '80's, the disparity between rich and poor countries increased. Upon release of the Brundtland report, Canada's first ministers, led by then prime minister Brian Mulroney, unanimously supported the report and committed themselves to sustainable development. This meant that all further economic initiatives should first be assessed for their ecological ramifications.

Upon re-election in 1988, Mulroney promised a Green Plan that would point to a new direction. When the Green Plan finally appeared in late 1990, environmental concerns had given way to economic imperatives.

That plan lacked an ecological framework for its programs and had neither the budget nor political clout to influence big departments like Finance. By the time of the Earth Summit in Rio in 1992, the momentum that propelled the environmental movement through the

by David Suzuki

'70's and '80's had faltered as governments were preoccupied with the economy.

Nevertheless, in a federal election obsessed by the economy, the Liberal "Red Book" on which Jean Chretien based his campaign states, "Business, labour and the general public increasingly understand that the natural environmental agenda can no longer be separated from the national economic agenda."

This is the context within which we must see a recommendation made in May by the all-party parliamentary standing committee on environment and sustainable development chaired by Charles Caccia.

Caccia is a former environment minister who has remained committed to eco-issues. His committee has recommended the appointment of a commissioner of environment and sustainable development who would be the environmental equivalent of the auditor general.

The commissioner would not be a political appointment and would have an arms-length relationship with government with a budget of about $5 million and a staff of about 30 people.

His/her responsibilities would be to report annually to Parliament on, "Federal policies, laws, regulations and programs impacting on sustainable development; the extent to which federal legislation and policies comply with Canada's international commitments; Environment Canada's capacity to lead the shift toward sustainability; and progress toward sustainable development by the government as a whole."

It's a small step toward moving from talk to implementation of the integration of the economy with ecological sustainability. The catastrophic collapse of the Atlantic fishery might have been avoided had there been a strong environmental advocate.

The fate of our forests, agriculture and cities is equally contentious and in need of a commissioner. The Brundtland report was published seven years ago. Since then, over 600 million human beings have been added to the world's population, 100 million hectares of forest destroyed and 175 billion tonnes of agricultural topsoil lost and as many as 350,000 species driven to extinction. How much longer can we make a mockery of sustainable living? This session of Parliament will decide on the proposed commissioner. Your MP needs a prod.

Don't forget the Membership night for the Minden Seniors' Curling Club on Monday, September 26 at 7:30 p.m. at the Curling Club. Cheese and refreshments will be served and prospective members are welcome.

Remember Kermit, the missing orange cat? He was missing for a month and a half and we just got a call from the ecstatic McLennan family from Oakville to say that he had been found last weekend close to where he went missing and was a very happy cat indeed to be home again. How nice to hear some good news for a change! Mrs. McLennan reports very little sleep was had the first night he was back, he kept purring and snuggling and kissing - sounds like he missed his family!

Edith and Roger Harris from Mission, B.C., had a wonderful reunion with her sister Doris Moore at Staunworth Court and with her niece and her husband, Carole and Ron MacKenzie. They very much enjoyed listening to her nephews Ian and Keith perform with the Northland Brass band. Roger, formerly in the Navy, was very impressed at the welcome he received at our legion, Branch 636 by Dave McAdam and Allan Rice. He was amazed at the talent shown by the pipe band and was happy to march in the parade with the Minden veterans on Decoration Day. Edith also had a happy reunion with her Grace Hospital classmates (graduates) Evelyn Gibson of Haliburton and Nancy Gayton of Minden.

Sincere sympathy to the families and friends of the late Phyllis Boles and Joseph Gillespie whose funerals were last week.

We heard that the western branches of the County Library had book exchanges and some new books out for readers on September 29. How fortunate we are to have such good reading available for us and staff members ready and willing to order our requests.

Betty and Gerald Hicks entertained seventeen friends from Kinview United Church in Oshawa one day last week. They toured the many beautiful and colourful areas in our county and had a great time.

Best wishes to the following on the sick list: Florence Robinson, Mary Wallace, Verne Graham and Jean Lacey. May you all feel much better soon.

Former resident Cora Hewitt of Phelpston spent several enjoyable days with Gladys Kellett-Wruth.

Jack and Ethel Cowan from Phelpston had a pleasant visit with his sisters Mary Cox and Evelyn Gibson.

Jim and Irene Husband from Aylth, Perthshire, Scotland visited her aunt Margaret McIntosh at her home on Pigeon Lake. The first time visitors to Canada enjoyed their stay in the Minden area and continue their tour with visits to Ottawa, South Porcupine and Orillia. We hope this will not be their last visit to our beautiful village.

Royal Canadian Legion Branch #441 Kinmount held Legion Week which was enjoyed by all with good food, prizes and fun. The Burk family from many places, held their annual golfing tournament here and afterwards fifty people gathered at Lochlin Centre for a great pot luck and had a good time together with amusing prizes and gifts for the children.

We do appreciate getting a list once in a while. Thanks to the office staff.

CARDS OF THANKS

BOLES: The family of the late Phyllis Boles, of Maple Lake, Haliburton, wishes to acknowledge the love and support received these last two months. We are grateful for the excellent care given by Dr. Kristie Gammon and the Emergency Department of the Haliburton Hospital, as well as, Dr. Heyes, her physician. A sincere thank you to those friends, neighbours and relatives who telephoned, sent cards, prepared food, visited or sent flowers. The prayers and flowers offered by the congregations of Maple Lake United Church and St. Peter's Anglican Church were much appreciated. We are comforted by the compassion and professionalism from the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home, Minden. Remembering these acts of kindness helps to ease our sorrow and loss.

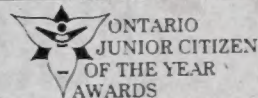

CARDS OF THANKS

Thank you all for your loving thoughtfulness and many kindnesses in the gifts of prayers and flowers, cards, telephone calls and visits, neighbourly acts and assistance in the memory of my dear husband.
June Mason.

Ken and Louise Leonard, directors of CSSM Bible Camp, Minden, would like to express their thanks to the following service clubs. They are Minden Kinette Club, Royal Canadian Legion Branch #636 Ladies Auxiliary, Minden Lioness Club and Rotary Club of Minden. Legion Branch 636 Minden. Thanks to all who purchased tickets in our draw for Showboat, the proceeds of which are going to our local Hospital Fund. The winners were Cal and Elaine Davison of R.R.1, Minden. 9D

Sincere thanks to everyone who attended the bridal shower for Terri Legge. It was great to see so many faces. Thank you to those who sent gifts because they couldn't be there and a very special thank you to those who brought the delicious food and helped with the clear up allowing me to maintain my sanity.
